City of Sydney Council to receive award from St John (NSW)

City of Sydney Council will receive a customer recognition certificate at a presentation ceremony held by St John Ambulance Australia (NSW) on Monday 18 February 2008.

The award will be presented to show appreciation and thank the Council for their long and continuous support of St John. Their support has included first aid training, kit restocking, and the purchase of emergency response equipment. The Council recently purchased 14 defibrillators for their main office and works depots.

Those attending the presentation from the Council include Monica Barone, CEO, Paulette Walker, OH&S Project Manager, David Cornett, Manager Security & Emergency Management, and from St John, Sean Gavin, CEO, and Amanda Murray, Account Development Manager.

Sean Gavin will present the award to the Council. He comments:

“St John is a self-funded organisation, and without the support of organisations such as the City of Sydney Council, we could not continue to fund the vital work of our volunteers. Training and first aid kit sales go directly to the charitable work of St John.

“The Council has for years called on our services to provide first aid training to their staff, as well as first aid products and re-stocking to ensure their workplace is as safe as possible. City of Sydney Council is very pro active in their first aid approach and should be commended for this.

“We are very appreciative of their commitment to St John.”

Media are welcome to attend the presentation.
