From saving lives to receiving awards

Leumeah volunteer honoured

14 October 2009. Leumeah resident Margaret Hyett gives up her spare time to provide first aid at local community and sporting events, but on Saturday 10 October, however, the St John Ambulance volunteer paused from helping injured people to receive an award for her voluntary work.

Ms Hyett received the Sixth Bar for 42 years of dedicated service to the community through St John Ambulance. She was amongst the 150 awardees at the St John (NSW) Annual Awards Ceremony, held at Sydney University.

St John (NSW), which is a self-funded charity and has been providing first aid services to the community for over 125 years, awarded its volunteers for their long term commitment.

Members of the public who provided outstanding first aid in various emergency situations and several organisations were also recognised for their support to St John.

Sean Gavin, CEO of St John (NSW), said the volunteers give up their time willingly and regularly to provide a service they believe in.

“They have quietly yet effectively assisted those in need at local sporting and cultural events as well as in large gatherings like the Sydney World Masters Games, Big Day Out, New Year’s Eve celebrations and the City to Surf.

“Other St John volunteers assist primary school aged children with reading and writing, while another group of volunteers assist Health Department nurses with the NSW Schools immunization Program.

“It’s an honour to recognise their contribution through this award ceremony”, Mr Gavin said.

In addition to its volunteer services, St John (NSW) has trained many hundreds of thousands of people in first aid. In many cases, this training has resulted in ordinary people having the courage, confidence and skills to manage an emergency situation, and in so doing, saving lives.

In 2008, when St John Ambulance celebrated its 125 years of service in Australia, over 3,500 volunteers provided more than 450,000 hours of voluntary service across the state in the areas of first aid, early literacy, immunisation and ophthalmic care.
